ABUELITA ELENA

Ay, mijo, I do. Especially this time of year. Music connects us to our ancestors, and it's become such an important part of how our family celebrates Día de Muertos. But if you don't stop to eat, you're going to fade away in the air, my small boy!

LUISA

Don't worry! We're about to fix that right now. We have so much to do to get ready for Día de los Muertos—the music, the decorations, all the different parts of the ofrenda that have to come together – and we sure can't do it on an empty stomach! Everyone, are you feeling hungry? (audience response)
Perfecto! The food is ready to eat!

ENRIQUE

Mi amor, look at you! You dance so beautifully.

LUISA

(laughing joyfully) Gracias! Did I ever tell you my abuelita taught me those steps when I was just a little girl? And she learned them from my bisabuela before that! Sometimes, I can feel them both dancing right beside me.

ENRIQUE

That sounds like a beautiful tradition!

LUISA

It's something I love to think about when we put out their photos for Día de Muertos. This time of year always makes me want to dance!
